Apology letter for not reporting to work

25th July 20XX

Subject: Apology letter for late payment

Dear Mr. Ricky

I am writing this letter to apologize for the late payment of interest for the loan taken by our company. I would like to mention that our company has taken a loan of $1.5 billion dollars for different expansion project. The interest for the said loan was to be serviced in every month as per the terms and conditions of the loan.

Unfortunately our company was unable to pay the interest for the last three months because of the poor financial heath due to ongoing euro zone crisis. Our revenues have declined by almost 50% while our quarterly profits have contracted by more than 90%. We are currently unable to fund our basic necessary expenses and we are using our internal resources to tide over this period of economic meltdown.

Hope that you will cooperate with us during these tough times of financial crisis in our company. I am confident that we will soon start paying the due interest of our loans once we get back on the growth path.

Yours Sincerely

Glenn Cowan

On the other hand, if you were late for the job when you should have been present, the excuses could be in order. It is important to look for a balance between excessively apologize and do not apologize at all. The following email can help you write your apologies in a colleague. 6. Dear Brandon, I am very sorry for my behavior in the staff of the meeting this morning. I really appreciate your clemency last week and I promise you that you haven't won. You must write this kind of letters very gently. After saying you're sorry, clearly and definitely recognize what was wrong. The e-mail is also available as a model that can be downloaded for use with Google Docs and Word Online. While excuses are important, you want to avoid constant excuses for every little mistake you do at work. A formal letter of corporate excuses is very crucial for any type of error. I hope you are willing to work together in the future. If you give a formal and elaborate excuse for every minor transgression, colleagues and employers can see you weak and insecure.
